Background

This is the NDIS Pricing Schedule for 2026-27, which the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) has published following the release of the Annual Pricing Review and the Fair Work Commission's Annual Wage Review decision.

This document is intended to help participants receive value for money when they purchase the supports that they need by providing guidance on appropriate prices for those supports. Providers can use the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) Pricing Schedule to inform their prices. Providers must discuss proposed changes to existing service agreements with participants and participants must agree to the changes.

The NDIS Pricing Schedule sets out information from the NDIA regarding what it considers to be the appropriate and reasonable maximum prices for all NDIS supports, and details the relevant factors and methods needed to understand and calculate those prices.

The NDIS Pricing Schedule is published against the background of the National Disability Insurance Scheme Amendment (Securing the NDIS for Future Generations) Bill 2026 (Bill), which was introduced into Parliament on 14 May 2026. Amongst other things, the Bill proposes to amend the National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013 to provide the Minister for the NDIS with the power to make a pricing determination, that sets out the maximum amount, or the method for determining the maximum amount, for a NDIS support. It would also confer the NDIA with a specific function to provide advice to the Minister for the NDIS for the purposes of making a pricing determination.

If the Bill is subsequently passed, it is anticipated that the NDIA's views on appropriate and reasonable prices as set out in the NDIS Pricing Schedule will then be used to inform advice provided by the NDIA to the Minister for the NDIS for the purposes of making a pricing determination.
